SENATE HAS THE LAST WORD

Senators seem to have taken a frightened attitude toward State Byrnes' revelation that Russia was secretly given the Kurile Islands and the southern half of Sakhalin island by Roosevelt at Yalta a year ago.

Mr. Byrnes, over the possibility that we may have to take over Russian leadership in strategic Pacific islands, which we won only at great expenditure of blood and money, while Russia gets control of a chain of islands which she never fought for and for which only a few days' participation in the Japanese war was required.

Senator Johnson of Colorado credits Senator Johnson of Colorado with having said that it's too bad the deal for the Kuriles was kept secret but that there is nothing to do now but abide by it.

Other senators, jealous of their treaty-making rights, know that the agreement is not irrevocable. The disposal of Japanese territory is a business of a formal peace treaty. And our agreements must have the approval of the senate.

The secret agreements made at Yalta is already in effect. Mr. Roosevelt's promise that Russia should have three votes in the United Nations organization—a promise ferreted out by the Washington New York newspaper after Mr. Roosevelt had said nothing about secret political deals at Yalta. It was fulfilled, of course, in getting the Ukrainian and Byelorussian S. S. R.'s the membership as independent states at San Francisco.

But the case of the Kuriles is different and more important. Mr. Roosevelt could not have made a flat promise of Kurile possession and no power to do so. And since Mr. Truman has not repudiated the promise seems further weakened now that he has left office. In any event ,the senate is the final boss.

There seems to be no reason why the United States could not make a separate deal at a peace conference for what she needs, in addition to Russian possession of the Kuriles. There is little danger of Russia's claim being forced upon us, since the United Nations organization, that the U N O will supervise and administer, under the trusteeship system, "such territories as may be placed thereafter by subsequent individual agreements."

Russia has an indisputable right to the strongest voice in the agreement disposing of Pacific territories which its armies had won alone. That isn't imperialism. It is simply that Russia has any valid claim to outshout us in these matters.

no larger than a pea or egg, must be surrounded by an extremely heavy shield to prevent the simultâneous emanation of dangerous death rays—the kind which destroyed the inhabitants of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The weight of the protective covering makes impractical the use of cosmic energy for ordinary purposes. With regard to an automobile or plane, for instance, the extra tonnage of the shield would offset the advantages of this substitute for gasoline.

FORMULA The scientists who headed the "Manhattan project" are now conducting experiments in an attempt to discover methods and substances that will lighten the shield and permit this form of power to be adopted to such fairly heavy vehicles as locomotives, commercial vessels and war craft, providing the battlewagons survive the May-July naval tests. But they have not yet found the proper formula.

They do believe, however, that atomic energy can be utilized for heating and lighting large cities within a short time. It can also provide power for certain types of industries centrally grouped. The cosmic plant could be placed underground or built in such a manner that the weight of the safe-guarding shield would not interfere with its practical performance.

FACT How revolutionary such an innovation would be, affecting the coal, gas, oil and water power industries, may be imagined from the following fact:

The conversion into energy of only 2 2/10 pounds of uranium—or any similar substance—will produce 25,000,000,000 kilowatt hours, or the same amount generated by the total American electric power industry when operating at night-and-day capacity for two months.

Conversely, only 8 and 5/10 kilowatt hours can be obtained from burning 2 and 2/10 pounds of coal.

As Senator McMahon recently said to a small group in Washington:

"Let the United Nations Organization put that in their pipe and smoke it!"

HEADACHES A close friend of President Truman scanned the front page of a Washington newspaper published on February 2 and sighed: "No wonder the boss has so many headaches and wishes he could turn his job over to a superman" Here are the headlines which inspired that comment and furnished a commentary on domestic and world conditions today:

cently shot the moon, refuse to volunteer any exact prophecies as to when the atom can be harnessed commercially. There are two many unknown factors and problems to be solved. But there is a fairly precise summary of their observations on this phase of the question:

It is doubtful whether atomic power can be used for propelling planes, ships, automobiles, dreadnoughts, locomotives, tanks, tractors, or any comparatively small vehicle for many many years.

The answer is that the most minute source of atomic power, even though

"Murder!" They Cried

THE STORY: When Betsy insists that Pen Downes is in love with her, Nana tells her about Fletch and Dru. But adds that Fletch loves Dru so much he refuses to touch her until he is free of Phillipa. Later, Nana overhears Betsy plead with Phillipa to divorce Fletch, saying that her father will take care of Phillipa financially.

IX

THERE was a break in the conversation as though Phillipa had stopped to light a cigaret. "What are you?" she went on. "An emissary from Papa?"

I could see Phillipa's eyes narrowing and her mouth straightening into a thin line as plainly as though I had been in the room.

"Tell him it isn't it? You people want the boys. They're Willsons, aren't they! Well, let me tell you. You won't get them. Do you understand? You won't get them. They're mine, too, and they're one thing the Willsons won't be able to get just because they want them. Everything's always been pretty easy for you people, hasn't it? Anything and everything you ever wanted you got, just like that, didn't you? The world was made for the Willsons, wasn't it? People were made for them too, weren't they? To work for them. Wait on them. Hire a man, work him for all he's worth; when you're done with him, kick him out. Marry a girl and decide she isn't good enough; kick her out, too."

Betsy broke the tirade, "Oh, Phil. It isn't that way at all."

But Phil was started now. "If you don't like a thing, get out a check book. Push other people around, then expect them to be grateful. Well, I made up my mind when I got in this family that they weren't pushing me around. They could boss me around the office, but once I was out of that place, I was done taking Willson orders. And I'm one thing you can't dispose of, just because you want to. You've always been able to reach out and take what you want . . ." Phillipa interrupted her own tirade, "Say!" her voice trailed off and her laughter tinkled through the room, a cool laughter like the tinkle of ice in glass. "Say!" she said. "What is this? A rehearsal? Are you planning to ask Pen Downes' wife to divorce him?"

BETSY in a forbidding tone said, "Stop that, Phillipa!"

But nothing was stopping Phillipa. "You little fool!" she laughed. "Pen Downes doesn't want you. What would he want with a bread and milk poultice?"

Betsy said again, "Stop it, Phil."

Phil was enjoying herself now. I could tell by her laughter when she said, "You think he is in love with you. That's good. Ask him where he is when he isn't with you. Go on, I dare you. You're afraid to, aren't you? I could tell you if I wanted to. You silly little idiot, thinking Pen Downes is in love with you."

I could tell Betsy's answer was coming through clenched teeth. "Phil, I tell you to stop it."

"Can't take it, huh?" Phil answered, "You know he doesn't want you. He could get a divorce if he wanted it. He doesn't want it. That wife in Connecticut has saved him several times from girls like you, who think they only have to reach out and take what they want."

Betsy said, "I won't listen to such talk. How would you know such things!"

Somehow I couldn't help but believe that Phillipa's answer was an honest one. "I make it my business to know."

AT that moment I think I was just a tiny bit grateful to Phillipa. After all, while she was being terribly unpleasant, she was telling Betsy the things her mother and I would like to have told her.

Phillipa was saying now, "You're not his kind of woman. Ask him and see what he says. He doesn't want you; he doesn't even want your money." I could hear her smack one hand smartly against the other. "He doesn't want your money, but I'll bet that wife of his would like a slice of it. What do you think she would do, Betsy, if she knew a few of the things that have been happening at 'Long Meadow'? Those days and evenings in Pen's Studio. So innocent! I wonder what she would think? Of course, for a little of the Willson money, she might be willing to think only the right things. I wonder what it would be worth to her to know . . . A divorce where there is a co-respondent is apt to be a bit nasty. The newspapers eat it up."

Betsy's answer with its implication made me ill. "Phillipa, you wouldn't dare."

Phillipa taunted, "Oh, wouldn't I! I think I'll go to Connecticut tomorrow. It might be interesting. In fact, I'm sure it would. It would be fun to see this family squirm for a change instead of lording it over every one."

Betsy said, "You better go now, Phillipa."

"Why?" Phillipa asked. "I'm enjoying myself. And you asked me to come in."

That was when Betsy lost control. "Get out," she fairly screamed. I heard her cross the room and fling the door so it struck the wall. "Get out!"

Then I heard the voice of Sarah, the upstairs girl. I never had trusted that girl and I had told Miss Jenny so. She had a definite list to the right like an old tug, which I was certain had come from leaning too close to doors.

"Why, Miss!" Sarah was saying. "Whatever are you doing with the poker in your hand and it 97 in the shade, and nary a fire in the house?"

I wondered how long Sarah had been in the hall.

Idaho and Oregon State college stretched their winning streaks in Saturday night's games with wins over University of Washington and Washington State college, respectively.

At Seattle the score was 40-38 for Idaho as the Vandals amassed a comfortable first half margin of 24-15 and then saw it dwindle to two points under repeated attacks by Washington. Idaho had won the previous night 51-48.

At Corvallis the Beavers had little trouble administering a whacking defeat to the invading Cougars, 55-33. Washington State had lost 63-43 Friday night.

Each of the conference leaders has three more games to finish out conference play, the Vandals all at home and the Beavers all away. Second place Oregon has two to go and could clinch the championship by winning both if the leaders lose all of theirs.

The schedule: February 22-23—Oregon State vs. Washington at Seattle; Oregon vs. Washington State at Pullman. February 25-26—Oregon vs. Idaho at Moscow. March 2—Washington State vs. Idaho at Moscow; Oregon vs. O. S. C. at Corvallis.

Elmer Layden Quits Football

NEW YORK, Feb. 18. (AP)—After 30 years in the game as a player, coach and executive, Elmer Layden has said goodbye to football.

Layden resigned a month ago as commissioner of professional football and president of the National Football league, and Saturday he bowed out of the sport completely by declining the NFL's offer to remain in a $20,000-a-year advisory post to Bert Bell, the new commissioner.

The Wallace Miners scored 11 points in a three-minute overtime period at St. Maries Saturday night to defeat the Lumberjacks 46-35.

The Miners blew an early lead and saw St. Maries tie the score at 35-all in the final minutes of the game, but completely overwhelmed the losers in the over-time period.

Edwards opened the extra period by sinking two field goals in quick succession. Larsen followed with two more, Hendrix sank a free throw and Stalwick added a field goal.

The Miners started fast and held a 10-1 lead midway in the first quarter, but St. Maries started creeping up and at the end of the first quarter the Miners were ahead only 10-8. St. Maries tied the score at 12-12 early in the second period, then went ahead 17-14, but at half-time Wallace led 21-20. At one point in the third quarter was ahead 24-22, but at the end of that period the Lumberjacks had grabbed a 26-24 lead. The Miners rallied in the final frame to make the score 30-26 and 35-30, but in the final minutes the loggers cracked the Wallace defense for two field goals and a free throw to tie up the score. Dimico sank the tying gift shot with only seconds to go.

The revamped Miner lineup functioned smoothly at times during the contest and with Tissaw and Stalwick opening up the opposition's defense. Larsen broke into the slot time and again. He led the scoring with 14 points. Kersey scored 13 for St. Maries.

SHORT SNORTED

CEDAR CITY, Utah. (AP)—A short-snorter $5 bill helped to clinch a holdup case. The victim identified the bill as one signed by his former crew mates in the Army Air Forces.
